in "retorped O'Rourke, kindly, rom Brooklyn, Brooklyn never champion yet." and he make your great little Dixon, go to the floor in defeat he'll do the trick with Erne."

McGovern in attack leaped into the air like a game rock, as though the excitement of hartle was stimulating him with galvante force. Every time he hit Erne a short, snapey sound followed, which told how hard the blows were.

A punch square on the chin sent the lightweight champlen to the floor. His face showed that he was in great danger, has he gaspel for wind, and as he did so the blood strayed all over. He was down faily nine seconds of the count, McGovern watched the count as calmly and as unperturbed as though he was a spectator.

The instant Erne got to his feet Terry was at him again, merchess and relenties. Oh, what a punching he gave the Buffalonian' Smash, bang, biff, thud, the blows sounded. Three of his blows landed on Erne's face, and the fourth oaught him fair in the middiff. He tottered into a left hook, and again he went to the floor.

Terry calmly redined against one of the pudded posts of the ring, and waited for him to rise. Frank was nearly done for when he chambered to his feet, and I looked to see the ond come immediately, Mechanically, Erne raised his arms to protect his jaws. Then he made a wild swing, but it didn't come within a yard of Terry's face.

Terry went to his man and sent in another hurricans of blows driving Erne hefore him, and again sending him to the floor. He was almost out, seeing which one of his seconds, anxious to spare him the humiliation of an actual knock-out, shield his sponge to the middle of the ring in acknowledgment of defeat.

Charley White, the referee, at once go between the men, and, touching McGovern lightly on the shoulder, said, "lits your light; go to your corner."

Terry hesitated a moment as though a doubt. Seeing the spenge, he comprehended the situation, and running over to his corner he began hugging Harris. A hundred men jumped over the press stand to shake the conqueror's hard, and the police had all they could do to keep the crowd back from him.

Meanwhile, Erne's seconds neightly him we him.

Meanwhile, Erne's seconds picked him up and dragged him to his corner and began their work of resuscitating him.

There was hardly a mark to be seen on McGovern's face or body, but Erns was terribly beaten. His nose was broken, one of his eyes was nearly closed, his mouth was split, and his body was badly lumped and contusel around the region of his heart and over his left kidney. He was a very badly beaten man.

One of the oddest things about the bout was the fact that before they had fought initute Erne was compelled to clinch at hold McGovern to save himself from pu-lahment. In the first round McGovern g hold McGovern to save himself from punishment. In the first round McGovern go a 'eff-hand stab, and he slipped at the same moment to his right knee. It wasn't a knock-down, though many thought it such. He took nine of his count and then jumped up, but before he got off his knee. Erne struck him, I have no idea that Frank really meant to hit him foul. I think that he was of the opinion that McGovern would get up sooner than he did and that the blow would catch him as he rose. Sam Harris called White's attention to the blow and a moment latter to the fact that Erne was violating the rules by 'holding.' White cautioned Frank, and in the year careful with his head, as in his rush he brought it rather foreibly against Erne's chest.

New York, July 20, 1906.—The truth of the old sporting maxim. "a match well made if Erne was to have another chance at Mediovern in a twenty-five round contest at 122 pounds he might outpoint the Brookly at 122 pounds he might outpoint the Brookly wender. I hardly think he would, were wonder. I hardly think he would, were they to meet again, even under catch weight. Mcthovern give Erns such a kimming as he will never forget, and no maiter what the conditions may be I don't think that Erne would ever face him again with ore-half the confidence he exhibited when they began the firs round Monday night. He will always remember those terrible body purches and jaw waitage he gad, and so remembering he will never be as vigorous, as clever or as confident again as he was. That, I think, is as true as I reaching. Consequently, I believe tast Terry is his master, now and hereafter, whether in a one-round contest or in a fight to a finish.

believed about 8000 apiece as his shale of the admission money.

Mediover also wins quite a hand-ome sum in side bets. By the way, it was not a heavy a betting fight as I anticipated. This was due to the overconfidence of Medi-vand they were so certain that Terry would win that in many cases they bet 2 to 1 on his receiving the decision. This cautid medaged Erne's partisans and kent a great many of them from betting as heavily as they would have done had the adds not been so great.

The causes of Varioocele are many-injuries, strains, prolonged exertion, sexual disease, hereditary weakness, etc., but the great majority of cases are due to either selfabuse in early life or later sexual excesses. There is a faulty circulation of blood to the sexual organs, and as a consequence of the insufficient nutrition the glands become saftened and wasted. The stagmant, poisoned blood is constantly being thrown into the general circulation, and as a result the whole system is indirectly affected, You become nervous, despondent and irritable, your memory fails, your old-time envergy and ambition are tacking, you cannot concentrate your mind on your work, you grow weather and weaker sexually, and ultimately become but a wreck of your former
